1. Access to community-based services is threatened:

   - Loss of personal assistance services will lead to re-institutionalization as individuals with disabilities are no longer able to remain living independently in their homes and community.

   - Family caregivers who are caring for family members with disabilities are becoming overwhelmed by 24-hour a day support with no access to a backup system of direct care workers. They are also worried about what happens if they become sick and immobilized by Coronavirus and no one to support their sons and daughters with disabilities.
Takeaways from First Listening Session (Slide 2 of 5)

2. Loss of job and income puts people at risk:
   - People with disabilities have been furloughed from jobs as have many direct care workers.
   - Loss of job coaches and other supports that people with intellectual and developmental disabilities depend on for community integrated employment. Service providers are closing due to the Coronavirus crisis and are struggling to remain financially viable so they can reopen later.
   - Loss of income to individuals with disabilities and family members who have been furloughed or terminated puts people at risk for meeting basic needs (food, paying rent). Unclear how an emergency payment of $1,000 would impact means-tested public benefits eligibility.
Takeaways from First Listening Session  (Slide 3 of 5)

3. Loss of access to existing healthcare services and fear of priority setting for testing, medical equipment and treatment that consider people with disabilities less valued.

4. Students are at risk of not being able to access IDEA services. Students with disabilities should not be discriminated against in the move to distance learning.

5. Must closely monitor policy developments and practices at state and community level against changes in access to healthcare and other services. Civil rights laws protecting against discrimination cannot be waived in emergency situations.
Takeaways from First Listening Session (Slide 4 of 5)

6. Federal agencies (Centers for Medicaid and Medicare Services (CMS), Rehabilitative Services Administration (RSA) and Office for Special Education (OSEP)) should offer flexibility in their rules and regulations and increase funding for needed supports and services to help states and nonprofit providers meet needs across environments (home, classroom, workplace, community).

7. Disability community (people and providers) must work closely with healthcare systems, emergency responders and public agencies to be more vigilant and not ignore the urgent needs of people across the spectrum of disabilities and families most adversely impacted by the Coronavirus crisis. Collaboration must be in planning and implementation of emergency response. Contingency plans must be in place at an individual, family, organization, public agency and community level as this crisis worsens and should include consideration of future emergency situations.
8. The power of unity of purpose is evident. The diverse disability community is unified by a common purpose to be heard and a public response must be developed to meet the emergency needs of people with disabilities and families, as well as service provider organizations. Their collective voice is already focused on educating decision makers at all levels of government that these needs not be omitted from emergency funding packages.

FRB, FDIC, OCC Issue Joint Statement on CRA Consideration for Activities in Response to COVID-19

Encourages financial institutions to meet the financial services needs of their customers and members

Working with Customers. Pursuant to the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA), the agencies will favorably consider retail banking services and retail lending activities in a financial institution’s assessment areas that are responsive to the needs of low- and moderate-income individuals, small businesses, and small farms affected by COVID-19 and that are consistent with safe and sound banking practices. These activities may include, but are not limited to:

• Waiving certain fees, such as:
  o Automated teller machine (ATM) fees for customers and non-customers,
  o Overdraft fees,
  o Late payment fees on credit cards and other loans, and
  o Early withdrawal penalties on time deposits;

• Easing restrictions on cashing out-of-state and non-customer checks;

• Expanding the availability of other short-term, unsecured credit products for creditworthy borrowers;

• Increasing credit card limits for creditworthy borrowers;

• Providing alternative service options to customers in light of limited ability to access branches; and

• Offering payment accommodations, such as allowing borrowers to defer or skip payments or extending the payment due date, which would avoid delinquencies and negative credit bureau reporting, caused by COVID-19-related issues.
Community Development Activities: In light of the declaration of a national emergency, this statement clarifies that financial institutions will receive CRA consideration for community development activities. Qualifying activities include those that help to revitalize or stabilize low- or moderate-income geographies as well as distressed or underserved non metropolitan middle-income geographies, and that support community services targeted to low- or moderate-income individuals. Such activities may include, but are not limited to:

- Loans, investments or services that support digital access for low- and moderate-income individuals or communities;
- Loans, investments or services that support access to health care, particularly for low- and moderate-income individuals or communities;
- Economic development activities that sustain small business operations, particularly in low- and moderate-income communities; and
- Investment or service activities that support provision of food supplies and services for low- and moderate-income individuals or communities.
